- Mayor's Chief of Infrastructure, Climate, and Mobility
  Alicia John-Baptiste, formerly with SPUR, the Planning Dept and the MTA, joined us tonight for a fireside chat on a few topics including the restructuring of City Hall Department's management, the impacts on transit given the recent election results, and a status report on the Street Safety Initiative Working Group. She is one of four Chiefs who reports directly to Mayor Lurie. Through her work at SPUR, they studied how government could work better. It is based on flexibility, adaptability, and accountability. San Francisco's structure was such that everyone reported directly to the Mayor. One of the recommendations was to create a Chief structure. Under Mayor Lurie, as of January 2025 there are 4 Chiefs: Housing and Economic Development, Public Safety, Health and Human Services are the other three. The Chief's role is to represent the Mayor's agenda and interface with their respective departments.

  Alicia discussed Muni and the recent election results and reviewed some of the changes made since the pandemic, including additional service coming in January.

  Regarding Pedestrian Safety, automated speed enforcement has been incredibly effective. Street design and changes can also be effective.

  Alice asked about the working group that is being formed to focus on micro-mobility issues. (NOTE: Our February 8th meeting will focus on this.)

  Followed by Q&A.
